Mr. Mellon's Act in Berengaria's Case Viewed as Test of Law -Protests to Be Filed

Washington Feels Sure of Its Ground and Declares Statute Stands, Seal or No Seal

NEW YORK, June 22 (A)-Upon announcement that the Cunarder Berengaria was coming here today with liquor under British Government seal to test the Treasury Department ruling that no liquor except for medicinal purposes must be carried across the three-mile limit, Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, from Washington ordered his agents to board the Britisher and seize her wet goods.

The seizure was ordered by the department after deciding on a policy of strict enforcement of its ship liquor regulations, in respect to all vessels which attempt to bring intoxicating liquor inside the three-mile limit under foreign Government seals. HARDING CRUSADE

President Pleads for Justice Over Force-Says Other Nations May Accept Provisions

ST. LOUIS, June 22 (AP)-The suggestion that reconstruction of the "creative machinery" of the Permanent Court of International Justice be made a condition to American adhesion to the tribunal was before the country and before the world today as the result of the pronouncement made by President Harding here last night in the first formal address of his western trip.

The suggestion as made by the Chief Executive was put forward he said, "to dispose conclusively of all other cited apprehensions of danger from the exercise of any influence whatsoever, either open or furtive, by the League of Nations or by any other organization." The main features of the reconstruction as proposed by Mr. Harding to accomplish this purpose, are: First—That the World Court be empowered to fill any vacancy without interposition from any other body. Second—That the existing authority of the permanent court of arbitration to nominate judges be continued and that the power to elect judges be transferred from the Council and Assembly of the League of Nations to the remaining members of the court. Such changes, combined with minor alterations, also set forth, the President was indicated as hoping, would tend to wipe out factional differences over the World Court issue.

Make Court What Name Implies Then, anticipating "the voice of the doubter," who might inquire whether the 40 nations now represented on the court would consent to these changes structure of the tribunal, Mr. Harding answered that "to submit terms which we consider essential to the preservation of our nationality is not an act of discourtesy; it is the only fair, square and honorable thing a great, self-respecting nation can do". The crux of the conditions suggested the President described as "the mak-

"Must there be a test of sincerity abroad as well as at home? Then the more quickly it can be made the bet-ter, the better for them and the better for us. There is nothing to be accomplished in ambiguity. We want to know. And the only way to find out

ing of the World Court precisely what

The President devoted virtually all of his address to the World Court issue, but he also reviewed briefly what had been done by his Administration to get America "back on the right track" in its domestic affairs. The most significant thing about the lection is the increase of the Labor would do well to have him for Although declaring he did not come prime minister if the party came into to make a "partisan report" he said he prime minister if the party came into power. "It is with that high purpose in mind that I advocate participation by the United States in the Permanent Court of International Justice," continued Mr. Harding. "Two conditions may be considered indispensable: "First-That the tribunal be so constituted as to appear and to be, in theory and practice, in form and in substance, beyond the shadow doubt, a World Court, and not League court.

"Second-That the United States shall occupy a plane of perfect equality with every other power." Elaborating upon his pronouncement that the court must not be League court, the Executive asserted that the country had an opportunity to indicate its desire to join the League in 1920, and it "most emphatically refused," and "it would refuse again, no less decisively today." He added, in part:

Throughout history there has been democratic and social progress, but such progress has not been made in a straight line, but in cycles similar to the business cycles studied so closely by economists. Social progress has been made sinuously by overlapping curves, by periodic swings, and interlocking. SHOEBUCKLE TAX

Rebellic may result or, at least, the escape of rebellious individuals. The demand increases for energetic leadership, and the social emphasis shifts once more to individualism: In some such committee of the Massachusetts Retail Liberalism was the outgrowth of Post-Renaissance individualism and re-sulted in new discoveries, inventions suited in new discoveries, inventions and the industrial revolution in England. Later the United States abolished slavery, a united Italy was formed and a new Germany came into existence. Here the cycle started to swing back, manifesting itself in the race for armaments and industrial autocracy.

The world, however, is on the thresh-bold of a new change. Europe and

There has been the formation of institutional groups by Capital and Labor on both continents, as well as close international trade as-Outside the economic are sociations. Outside the economic area the proliferation of associations in every field, from the union of churches to the Ku Klux Klan, bears further witness of the deep and pervading de-sire for social co-operation and fellowship.

"The rapid growth of social groups and sub-groups with their diffused loyalties leading to clashes and struggles between groups as exemplified by the demarcation—or jurisdictional disputes between the labor unions, or even the athletic rivalries between colleges—is an additional factor nothing can prevent the formation of political "blocs" and nothing can prevent them from clashing until they discover the change in rhythm. Europe is learning to reconcile and to conciliate the differences of group interests-no longer to rule by dividing This is our task in the United States! "Our civilization with a social mo-

But that assertion alone without intelligent planning and international organization will not avert another cataclysm Make the League of Nations such an agency of conference and adjustment, if it is not such already, and put the United States in it—taking the World Court in our stride. It is not so much that the world needs us there: we need for our own sake not to remain aloof. We cannot afford to deny the social motive in our world relations. This is our next step in the rhythm of history.

One of the reasons for selecting the Pacific coast cities for the conventions of the National Education Association World Conference on Education is that educational methods here are so far advanced, and that many of the problems of the future requiring educational background are expected to be worked out in this part of the world.

Dacre of San Francisco, president of the league.

The report of Prof. Albert R. Lang of Palo Alto is to form the basis for a "co-operation drive," pointing the importance of American teaching methods and the necessity of rescuing the grade teachers from obscurities seemingly imposed by a preoccupied superintendency.

The grade teacher, the keystone of the arch of pedagogy, has been the last to organize her forces. A roll of 23,000 members embracing nearly every state in the Union, however, attests the success of initial work accomplished by the National League of Teachers' Associations.

Professor Lang takes issue with the present American public school syswhich is tending toward an expensive "overhead" of administrative machinery and "unconscious subjuga-tion of the grade teacher." During the town meeting days of early colonial times, he observes, the classroom teacher held all the status that existed in the teachers' profession. Even for some time after the forming of "school committees" the classroom teacher continued supreme in the school realm.

Then, with the growth of cities, the advent of the principal, the superintendent and numerous supervisors, the grade teacher "submerged in a mass of organization and system." Superimposed institutes displaced voluntary associations. The enduring strength and permanency of the American public school system is thereby held endangered. Professionalism, Professor Lang adds, has been

Sounder Basis for Teachers

This is the situation faced by the National League. Its objectives are organization, stiffening of professional standards, and the dominance of the public grade school system as a leader in the educational field instead of merely a perfunctory push-off by poorly paid teachers.

To place teachers' pensions in the United States upon a more sound and uniform basis, by inducing the Federal Government to assume obligation for the accrued liability over a period of 50 years, is the basis of a plan to be placed before the National Education Association at its opening meet-ing by Philip E. ### Education in Italy

Princess Santa added that vocational education in Italy is centered today in "special schools," detached from the regular school system, and perfunctory courses, "sewing for girls and drawing for boys," have failed to meet requirements. The function of the ordinary Italian school, she says, is twofold: to educate in the classics for the professions or give elementary training to the 14-year age limit for child labor when the majority become manual laborers. There is no intermediate between five hours of solid academics six days a week and indeterminate elementary education. This is held to be no reflection on far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. As to efficiency, the public-school graduate is required to pass an examination under state supervision prior to receiving a state diploma. This system obtains through the elementary division, with children from 6 to 14 years; from 14 to 18 years for secondary and normal or technical schools; from 19 to 22 for university work. To a certain extent, the Princess said, education in Italy bears the impress of medieval times, with characteristic bent toward the classics, history, and philosophy. Chemistry and physics are forging to the front, due to German influences, but the elementary school, which is the finishing school for a majority of pupils, educates neither for the professions nor for skilled positions in the trades. elementary schools must be articulated to Italy's social and industrial life, and vocational training in every school is the urgent need, according to Princess Borghese. She added:

International co-ordination of educational forces is bound to effect tremendous changes in the school systems of Europe where old-world ideas are entrenched. Remedy Cause of Delinquency How can we co-operate with juvenile courts to that end? We must first become thoroughly imbued with the idea that there is a definite cause back of every delinquency; that the removal of the cause will save not only the boy involved, but others; that the boy who can be saved from himself and from his environment and evil tendencies be made into an upright citizen and be built into an asset for society rather

When the boy realizes that big-hearted, whole-souled men are interest-ing themselves and putting in time and work to help him out of a serious sit-uation, he will usually give information to the committee that could not other-wise have been obtained. A committee can so handle a series of conference with a boy that he will go through a process of genuine regeneration, and will make to the committee, or to some man of the committee, a pledge that man of the committee, a pledge that he would never make to the court. The promises a boy makes to the court are usually actuated by fear or the hope of escape from punishment. The promises he makes to men who are working with him and have won his confidence are guileless and are made with the de-termination on his part to make good Assuming that we have succeeded in etting our boy out of his predicament, he real work has just begun. He said:

"Civilization is threatened today b same danger which threatened Rome 1500 years ago. As in Rome in 423, so now, not only the habits but the thoughts and religions and philoso-phies upon which civilization are based re in danger of destruction, and civil ization, if it would survive the perils which threaten it, must no longer proceed by the blind, animal method of rial and error, but by conscious effort of will, develop powers and processes of creative thought for the guidance of

Linked Europe and Asia

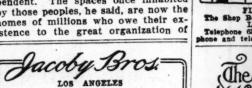

Professor Wallas in opening his lecture linked Europe and Asia tosia, today possessed by fear and a sense of helplessness in the face of post-war instabilities and disillusionments, sliding down a decline into a period of dark ages for want of leadership and guidance and through inability to bring to bear upon the present difficulties minds trained to creative thought and the leadership which is demanded. Continuing, he said:

Continuing, he said:

In spite of the hopes which buoyed up those who suffered and those who died in the inevitable Great War, conditions throughout the world have grown, since 1918, steadily worse, and there is everywhere the feeling that human events have passed beyond the powers of humanity to control. In China, Russide was appointed to select some definite work in line with the ideals of Rotary. No one can claim that the great original religions guide human events, or even that the instinct of patriotism guides humanity. In fact, the patriotic instinct is often blindly as the marching instinct ribes of ants.

Professor Wallas also called attention to the boasted defiance of legality of the followers of Trotzky and of Mussolini, of large groups in Bulgaria, and even, he said, in France.

"And the new dark ages, if they come," he said, "must inevitably destroy half the population of the great Eurasian continent." called attention to the fact that in the dark ages of the past the continents were peopled by peasants and shepherds, dwelling in their own huts, and for the most part, economically inde pendent. The spaces once inhabited by those peoples, he said, are now the homes of millions who owe their existence to the great organization of Optimism in Analysis There was optimism, however, in Professor Wallas' analysis of the reasons why he believes no such comlete débacle as befell Rome can overtake the world today. He pointed out the tremendous mass of knowledge now scattered broadcast throughout the world. "The body of knowledge concerning the control of civilization by rationalized human purpose is vastly greater," he said, "than ever before, and it is impossible now for any one great catastrophe such as the to wipe out of existence the entire accumulation of human knowledge."

"Moreover," he said, "whereas Rome was a city made into a world, there are now islands of civilization capable of withstanding and surviving a death blow dealt to another of civilization's parts. In 432 the fall of Rome necessarily meant the fall of the world. Now, however, the world cannot be felled so easily, and a continent such as America, in reality a great island of civilization, can for a long period gether as one great continent, Eura-remain unaffected by catastrophes which may overwhelm other portions of the world." It was the speaker' final hope that man by developing his own processes of thought can build a better civilized life, by the conscious effort of his own will evolve a society greater than any yet achieved. This, he said, must be the remedy if man is to avoid new dark ages and slow reries or in cities of refuge for the mind,

BELFAST, June 8 (Special Correspondence)-In moving the second reading of the education bill in the Northern Senate the Marquis of Londonderry went over some of the points of the bill which had aroused discussion. Referring to the financial arrangement of the bill, the Marquis stated that the Government hoped to make a grant of £2 for every £1 of

A committee had also been sitting under the direction of Mr. McKeown to discuss a new basis of remuneration for Sunday school teachers and a revised scale would be adopted. There had been much criticism on the subject of the provision for religious in-struction, but the Minister insisted that moral instruction should be associated with secular instruction.

Teachers for All Creeds

The Government hoped to supply teachers in sufficient numbers to suit all denominations and creeds. There has been no further statement from the hierarchy regarding the bill; and, in any case the number of Roman Catholic applicants for tuition at the Government Training College has again increased. There were 50 such applicants.

It does not appear that the Roman Catholic section of the community objects to the bill as a bill. Their chief grievance, and one which is at the bottom of most of their criticism of Sir James Craig's Government, is the abolition of proportional representation. On the other hand, many Roman Catholics have testified to the impartial treatment they have re-ceived at the hands of the Govern-

CROWDS OF HUNGARY'S EMIGRES DISCOVER A SOLACE IN VIENNA

Oscar Jaszy, Karolyi's Foreign Minister, and Baron Hatvarry, the Sugar King, Have Settled in Comfort

By MARJORIE SHULER VIENNA, June 7 (Staff Correspondence)—A Hungarian boy chanced upon a copy of Dickens, translated into German. "A nation which has a writer like this must be good; I will learn its language," declared the small boy. Before he had attained the digboy. Before he had attained the dignity of men's clothes, he had written an English grammar, used his Russia joining with a Communistic pocket money to have plates lithoGermany to crush Poland as many graphed and published, and had sold out an entire edition to his schoolmates, who were thus led on to learn English. Today, although he has never been in an English-speaking country, that young man speaks and writes English perfectly, and is be-coming one of the important writers of the day in central Europe, and his study in Vienna is now a center for a group of Hungarian émigrés.

There are hundreds of such émigrés.

Men who dare not return to Hungary because of their political activities under the Karolyi régime, or men who are so dissatisfied with the Hungarian Government of today that they are unwilling to return. To the former group belong two men who are often to be found in the study. They are Oscar Jaszi, Minister of Foreign Affairs under Karolyi and Baron Louis Hatvany, "the sugar king of Hungary," who had much to do with financing the Karolyi régime.

Harvard Is Defeated in Freshman and Junjor Varsity Events

by Over Four Lengths NEW LONDON, Conn., June 22 (Spe-

Her first crew has won 'all its races this year, while the junior boat has lost all of its engagements. And yet Harvard's second varsity is supposed to be only slightly inferior to her first boat. It would seem, therefore, that Yale's big crew should be able to win very much as it pleases today. There is one hope for Harvard and that is seen in the fact that Coach E. O. Leader confessed today that he had spent the majority of his time during the last two weeks on his junior varsity, realizing that they were considerably below form, and for that reason they may have been a much different crew today than they have generally been considered.

A brisk southerly wind was blowing up from the Sound when the freshman boats lined up at the mark at the submarine base at 11:06 o'clock, about 15 minutes late. The wind was a following one, and helped the crews away to a fast start. Both boats were wide awake and responded well to starter W. A. Meiklehams instructions. It was only a few seconds, however, before only a few seconds, however, before Yale began to let out. It generally believed that Harvard had made a distinct improvement since her sojourn under F. J. Muller at Red Top. And indeed she had. Had the race been rowled a month ago, Yale would probably have won by any distance she desired. Greater and greater confidence has been developing in the Harvard ranks the past few days, until it was thought around here yesterday that today's races would all be hard fought.

Apparently Yale has a greater tric of crews than even the most enthusiastic had supposed. Harvard had improved, but had not improved sufficiently to cope with the wonderful new system of the Blue.

The peculiar feature about this morning's races was the fact that 33, with Harvard about a beat higher. Yale won by almost identical mar- In the next quarter-mile Yale added gins. of open water. Yale rowed the new Leader stroke to perfection. The Leader system has reigned supreme at New Haven from freshman to varsity ranks, and it cropped up prominently in the races this morning. Her men rowed a short, vicious, savagely executed swing, falling only a few inches behind the perpendicular, biting the catch hard and furiously, sweeping through with a brisk drive. They washed out cleanly, and went back evenly after their next stroke. There was practically no check in either their freshman or junior varsity boats, and in short their of four upper-class men and four general appearance was beautiful to freshmen, defeated the Yale combinawatch They row a radically different stroke from anything Yale has ever known, and they are undoubtedly won-

Should Yale indeed triumph, it will bring her crews through to a season without a reverse, sharply in contrast to her record of the past several years when she consistently fell behind all rivals. It appears that Yale has installed a rowing system which is a success in every sense of the word and one which

The second varsity race was virtucrews rowed very evenly in beat, usually in the vicinity of 34 strokes to the minute. It looked like a good race at first. Yale got the jump and at three-eighths of a mile had twothirds of a length. Harvard was row ing only 34 strokes to the minute, and as the crews approached the halfmile buoys it was observed that the Crimson shell was forging ahead. Harvard closed down the margin of her opponents to a half length as the flags were passed. But Yale met the challenge. Lowering her stroke to a 33, but applying tremendous power, Yale forged rapidly into the lead, and

It was apparent that Harvard lacked power and condition. One of the Yale oarsmen whispered to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor yesterday that Coach Leader was a "slave driver," and his crews looked the part today. They were finished for a fighting, desperate race, whereas Harvard couldn't stand the pace. It was simply a case of better coached, better conditioned, better seasoned, better trained, better thinking crews beating a pair of strug-gling and game, but always hopeless,

They had been hailed as a super first-year crew, after their defeat of the Navy plebes, and Princeton freshmen and their excellent race against the powerful Cornell yearlings. But they were utterly no match for Yale today. The Harvard freshmen rowed a longer stroke than the Harvard second varsity, and it included a number of other

Manager F. L. Chance gave William their work all through last season—winning and losing in "streaks." It does a team very little good to take five or six games in a row, if a slump invariably follows such a performance.

On Walter Gerber's safe fly to center, which should have been caught, Jacob-son registered. Boston's run was allowed to come over unopposed. The climax to an unfortunate year of losses for the Illini in other sports.

The penultimate matches which yesterday determined the selection of two team mates to meet in final combat for Conference honors were victories for the first man on the Illinois team, R. E. Rolfe '23. and for the captain and second man, A. L. Novotny '23. When Rolfe meets his captain in their 36-hole final today, it will be a struggle between a hard, long driver and a consistent, accurate-iron and apa consistent, accurate-iron and approach-shot player. Novotny, for all his small size, is the hard driver, a factor which aided him yesterday in defeating the best that the University of Michigan could offer, its captain, H. T. Smtih '24, a splendid match golfer, who surprised his followers by weakening on the green. The final score was 4 and 3.

Rolfe came through into the finals in the other brackets in what was the most interesting and hard-fought match of the tournament. His consistent accuracy finally outpaced the more erratic brilliance of his opponent the man whom local enthusiasts had counted on-G. H. Hartmann '23, University of Chicago captain. Hartmann is Chicago district champion and his defeat by Rolfe, 4 and 2, was a repetition of last year's "Big Ten" tourney when he was eliminated in the semifinals by the same player, who was in turn defeated in the finals. experience and his play yesterday, although the match should be very close if Novotny can maintain his same form. Both had cards of 80 yesterday in their first rounds.

Putting on the large difficult greens really decided both matches yesterday as all players failed to master this as all players failed to master this branch of the game. Hartmann jumped into a lead on the first hole in the morning and he maintained this advantage until the fifteenth after six consecutive holes were halved. Rolfe took well-placed pars on this and on the seventeenth playing one up, he lost this stroke on the eighteenth by missing a six-foot putt, making them even up at half way. In the afternoon the advantage, which was never more than one hole, waged back and forth between the two until the ninth when Hartmann's good run-up and eight-foot putt gave him a par 4 and screen in the States, who sent in a score of 67 hits, 355 score. The previous high score in the National Round was held by Mrs. E. W. Frentz of Boston and was 63 hits, 351 score. In the Columbia Round was held by Mrs. Frentz made a new season's record last week of 66 hits, 392 score. The former record in the Columbia Round was held by Mrs. Soorma Peirce of Boston and was 66 hits, 350 score. The scores appearing in this week's Bulletin and the morning and he maintained this advantage until the fifteenth after six core, this being a perfect score as response to the morning and he maintained this advantage until the fifteenth after six consecutive holes were halved. Rolfe took well-placed pars on this and on the seventeenth playing one up, he lost this stroke on the eighteenth by missing a six-foot putt, making them even up at half way. In the afternoon the advantage, which was never more than one hole, waged back and forth between the two until the ninth was held by Miss Norma Peirce of Boston and was 66 hits, 350 score. The scores appearing in this week's Bulletin the minute of the morning and he maintained this advantage with the minute of the morning and hem even up and the morning and the morn when Hartmann's good run-up and eight-foot putt gave him a par 4 and the lead, one up, for 27 holes.

At this point the Illinois veteran played his best golf, which he appeared to have held in reserve during the entire meet for this moment. He took pars on the tenth, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth, through long, straight driving, accurate pitch shots and better putting than he has shown before. Hartmann found the rough on his first two shots on the tenth, went into waten in a trap on the eleventh, took three putts on the thirteenth, and took two to get out of a trap by the sixteenth green, conceding the match there after losing five of the last seven holes. He showed wonderful ability to himself out of tight places, beautiful brassie shot from a lie in the rough on the 500-yard sixth finding the green for two and another pitch from dense woods bringing him up even with Rolfe on the green on the thirteenth, but failure to settle down on the greens cost him the match.

Novotny and Smith played mediocre golf for their first nine holes, after which they were all square, but the Ilinois captain pulled away on the tenth despite a birdie 2 for Smith on the short twelfth by a perfect iron drive, but the latter missed a short putt on the eleventh for a 6 and could not keep up with Novotny's steady pars on the last three holes, putting

Dr. King forced the net position from the very start, fairly storming the barrier and cutting off returns short, for it is necessary when opposing a player like Bassford to kill on almost every shot, in order to hold the upper hand.

Kashio came through at the expense of Hugh Oakley of Montclair, being forced to play three sets, at 6-2, 5-7, 6—2, in a match that was devoid of brilliant play, yet one in which both men played a sound back-court game. with rallies long and stubbornly contested. ## YACHT MEN LOOK FOR

NEW YORK, June 22—While the New York Yacht Club has not received any indications from Sir Thomas Lipton that he intends to send a challengs for the America Cup next year speculation is rife in this city regarding one being sent in the near future, and it is based on the fact that work was started on reconditioning th meter Shamrock which has been there since 1920, when it was sent over to the 23-meter Shamrock, as well as the last challenger, have been stored to have the former ready to sail for England by Aug. 1. This has led to the belief that it is to be used for a trial yacht to the new challenger, which is expected to be ready next spring. It is also claimed that the Shamrock IV will be put in condition next spring, and used as a trial yacht to the new challenger after the latter reaches the United States

In order to race for the cup next year. Sir Thomas will have to send his official challenge at least seven 65 292 months before the date of races, so 56 272 that he still has plenty of time to do this, if he plans to challenge for 1924.

by! Ijin San, gooda-by! derstand. It is a greeting, a greetgooda-by!" The short street, perhaps 300 yards, that leads from the front gate of our little house in Tokyo to the main street with its clanging tram line swarms with children. They derstand. It is a greeting, a greeting of friendliness and courtesy. Over dand over they say it. "Gooda-by!" to child and perhaps we would have comes the answer from the Ijin San, gooda-by! to child and perhaps we would have comes the answer from the Ijin San guests from as far away as the Gate of the Tiger, which is where we transfer when we ride to work.

Through the grating is to be seen the clean, bare, yellow interior of true Japanese houses, the mats gleaming and a single painting or the characters of a short bit of poetry forming the sole decoration for the paper and plaster walls. A few of the houses have a tiny garden plot in front, but most of them open directly on the street, for our neighbors are not wealthy.

The voices of the children are raised as they rush about in their play, but from the 30 or 40 or 50 little throats there does not ascend such a volume of noise as would be expected in America. They are happy, smiling all day long, but they are not exuberant as they would be in the West. Their happiness is shown by their smiles rather than their laughter.

Gooda-by! Gooda-by!

"Gooda-by! Gooda-by!" One of the great events of the day has come. The Ijin San are coming home. The three white-faced foreign ers who live in the house of the temple and who cannot talk except in a strange, incomprehensible manner, have rounded the corner by the tram way that is called Gazembo. They are smiling, but the children smile, too. "Gooda-by! Gooda-by!" shout the childish voices. It is the only word

The Bond of Peace

By REAR ADMIRAL RONALD A. HOPWOOD, C. B.

IT HAS been truly said, on both sides of the Atlantic, that the peace of the world depends, very largely, upon a close Anglo-American friendship, but I would suggest that, for practical results, something more is required. Material bonds, however, when a alliences or practic heard ultisuch as alliances or pacts based ulti-mately upon combinations of force, and formed to balance or control simi-namely, the acutest "unrest" between lar opposing groups, have always led to eventual disaster. What then is the "mariners" who sailed with Drake, fostered and primarily in the interests of the contracting parties themselves, wherein lies their fatal flaw; a bond for service to others is the only practical way of eliminating this certain source of corrosion, however visionary it may sound. Here is an instance of such voyage and Drake himself had come believe that it was given to us "for our example"?

The circumstances are worth re-

Sir Julian Corbett, writing of Drake and of the upheaval caused in his native town of Tavistock at Whitsun-tide, 1549, when King Edward VI Prayer Book was first ordered to be read, says:

The material crisis of the voyage came later, when the Golden Hinde upon which depended the course of the world's history lay in peril on a rock off Celebes for 24 hours. Wealth "enough to make a miser weep to think on it," was jettisoned, together with armament, so that she might

Such issues as Woolworth and yield less than 4 per cent. Many stocks such as Steel and American Can still sell to yield less than 6 per cent desnite considerable price recessions, but a goodly number of representative issues may be purchased at prices which give almost fantastically high yields.

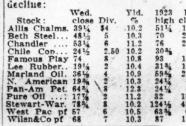

Almost all classes of stocks may now be found in the group of those which yield more than 10 per cent. Despite the great activity in the steel industry Bethlehem has not been reporting commensurate earnings. The company is also somewhat weak in working capital as compared with its great rival. George M. Verity

EORGE M. VERITY, president of the American Rolling Mill Company, whose chief works are at Middletown, O., with branches at Columbus, O., and Zanesville, O., has developed an ideal in the realm of cooperative effort in his organization that is truly remarkable. In the 24 years that Mr. Verity has been at the head of this big steel concern, no strike or labor trouble of any kind has taken place among the thousands of employees in the several plants.

An insight into the cause of this splendid record is revealed by Mr. Verity's own words, regarding the relationship between the company and its employees: "Any man who works for us in any capacity and does not eel that this is the one company in the world for him to work with and be happy, is not yet really one of us. It has been Mr. Verity's aim to build a co-operative interest that would unite his organization, eliminate all misunderstanding and thereby remove labor troubles. Results show that he has been successful, for "Armco" loyalty has become a tangible force, daily proving that a large organization can be knit closely together when the right ideals are applied. It is this company loyalty that gives his employees a real interest in their work, that prompts them to aid in building up the employees association, give time to athletic and social activities and, most important of all, to be ready to help any fellow worker in need. Mr. Verity was reared in East Liberty, O., and graduated from high school and commercial college. His first position of real responsibility was as manager of the Standish Wholesale Grocery Company in 1886. Three years later he was made manager of the Sargendorf Iron Roofing & Corrugating Company, later advancing to the office of vice-president and manager when the company was reorganized as the American Steel Roofing Company in 1891. In 1899 the American Steel Roofing Company was absorbed by the American Rolling Mill Company and Mr. Verity was made president of the latter concern, which position he has held ever since.

A Blow for La Follette

Senator La Follette's "valuation conference" received a crushing blow by the publicity given the 11 questions submitted to it by members of the Chicago Association of Commerce, including J. P. Haynes, traffic director; J. T. Pirie of Carson, Pirie, Scott; T. H. Eddy, vice-president of Marshall Field; J. Charles Maddison, vice-president, Montgomery Ward & Co.; A. A. Sprague, Sprague, Warner & Co.; F. W. Ellis, vice-president, Armour & Co.; J. Harry Selz, president, Selz, Schwab & Co., and J. J. Wait of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. (all of be it noted, represent houses shipping a large volume of traffic).

The point is made that if the railroads are a public necessity and therefore must be restricted, why also should not food products be regulated ownership-the ultimate object of the radicals—the association states that in Canada, the Canadian Pacific (privately owned) is one of the strongest railroads, financially, of any whose stock is listed on the New York tional railways (Government owned) have been a constant source of expense to the people of the Dominion since their acquisition. Finally, the association members say that even a reduction in railroad valuations of $7,000,000,000, as Senator Brookhart has proposed, would save the public less than 6 per cent in rates on the basis of present earnings, expenses and taxes, or an average of $3.50 per capita, per annum.

The Senator and his comrades sent out a memorandum replying briefly to each point, although lack of a another. ### New England Roads

Hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the proposed consolidation of New England roads were completed last week. J. H. Hustis, president of the Boston & Maine and a former New York Central official, appeared to favor a merging of his property with the New York Central, although admitting that if the Delaware & Hudson should form a strong western affiliation, this then would be an alternative merger, suitable for the Boston & Maine to enter. "In my judgment," he stated, "it would be to the advantage of the Boston & Maine as well as to the territory served by it to be affiliated with a strong east and west system."

E. J. Pearson, the president of the New Haven, who came to New England from the Texas & Pacific, made a strong plea for complete inde-pendence of the New Haven, stating that the road is regaining its former prestige slowly, but that no trunk line is anxious to merge with it until it shall become more prosperous. "The management," Mr. Pearson continued. "confident of the future, may be pardoned for not wishing to force an anwilling partnership.' Percy R. Todd, president of the Bangor & Aroostook, and responsible for the remarkable prosperity of that line in contrast to the other New England roads, also asked for indepen-The questions asked, briefly, "why the group in session did not consider that with Mr. Pearson that a combined New other body would serve better the public interest; what would be the result if railroad earnings were result if railroad earnings were no mitted that personally, he would pre-longer sufficient to pay interest on fer "as a stockholder in the Bangor & funded debts; and if railroad securi- Aroostook to get New York Central or ties become less attractive by reason Delaware & Hudson dollars."

To The Public

We have information we believe to be reliable that less than 600 operators voted at the strike poll of telephone operators at Chipman Hall, Tuesday, June 19th.

There are approximately 6000 operators in the Metropolitan Boston district. Over 90 per cent of them refrained from participation in this referendum.

If a strike is called, therefore, it will be with the expressed sanction of less than 10 per cent of the operating force in this area.

Douglas fir is now a little stronger in price than southern yellow pine. This is due to the fact that west coast mills still have many orders for railroad and car material on their books and the California and off-shore busi-ness is holding in sufficient volume to make them a little more independent. There has been a softening in some items of slash-grain uppers, such as flooring and ceiling, but vertical grain timbers and dimension are firm in price, although the demand is

A RECORD LEVEL

Conservatism in Business Shows Signs of Giving Way to Greater Freedom

Combined figures, representing all beyond that average in the 12 months sections of the United States, show ended with April, Southern in the that production continues at the highsections of the United States, show est level in history, says the First Naage. For the first four months of tional Bank of Boston, Output, with current year, however, Southern present effective plant capacity and existing labor supply, is at or yery near the maximum. Distribution, as evidenced by extremely high car loading figures, is very satisfactory Retail trade, New England excepted, is holding up well.

The rapid—10 per cent in a little more than a year—rise in wholesale prices has not fully reached the retail figures and consequently has not yet materially affected the purchasing power of the consumer. On the contrary, the latter's wages have risen during this period. The fly in the ointment is the wave of conservatism which has swept over ing a 2 per cent improvement over of conservatism which has swept over the previous year, is using about 35 the country in the last two months but which already shows signs of subsiding. This recession in business, which is being felt most acutely in New England, has shown itself in a falling off in orders and has brought about market curtailment in manufacturing, especially in cotton textiles, buying has been dull, although the mills continue consuming the raw material in huge quantities. The apprehension of runaway markets and inflation has been widespread, and the wholesale markets. therefore, extremely sensitive. seems clear that no excessive stocks of goods exist, and that manufactur- Fo ers, wholesalers and retailers, do not with propose to take any undue risks in increasing inventories. The conviction that the present recession is temporary and in the nature of a readjustment, is quite generally held, and, consequently, a feeling of optimism prevails regarding fall busi-This opinion is based on the fact that the symptoms which pre-ceded the 1920 deflation are almost entirely lacking.

pictures appeared. Soon after, the same sort of silhouette pictures, made by American manufacturers, were offered for sale. Now the art or gift shop which does not carry these fragile bits of paper is the exception.

Silhouette pictures are lovely when mounted on white mat stock, covered with glass and framed in black. There is, at present, a revived interest in the gummed black paper binding, and it is used a great deal with the silhouette picture. Instead of applying the paper binding directly to the glass, as was the old method, several thicknesses of cardboard strips are glued together, and then glued to the glass, and the binding is put on over this, giving the effect of a wooder This binding is especially good to use with silhouettes for it is inex pensive and can be changed as often as one finds a lovelier silhouette pic ture to replace the one already Silhouette pictures - especially of dancing figures - mounted on white are used a great deal in making trays. Small trays will show a bit of scenery For use under vases to protect the finish of the tables circles of glass from four to eight inches across are ornamental. Under these are placed silhouette pictures mounted either on white or colored cardboard, with a piece of felt on the bottom to protect the table. The whole is bound together with gummed picture-binding of a color matching the mounting of the silhouette. On top of this binding a strip of gold lace is glued.

visit to the store where the embroidery is to be seen is a very interesting experience. Copies of the old canvas work, both the cross-stitch and the finer tent stitch, are finding a good market among private buyers and furniture stores. A wonderful example of tent stitch was seen in an old six-teenth-century map of London from the Bodlean Library, Oxford, which has been lent to the Kensington School of Needlework for purposes of reproduction. The original copy made by one of the men is carried out in beautiful soft yellow and green tones and represents a bird's eye view of the city and surroundings, the various districts being indicated by little hills with clusters of houses on them and the names such as Hampstead, Highgate, Tottenham, done in black letters.

There are also chair and stool covers, pole screens, and bell pulls in designs copied or adapted from lovely antique pieces of needlework lent by The beautiful old coloring is wonderfully reproduced, the wool having in some instances been specially dyed for the purpose.

Many individual orders are executed. At the time of the writer's visit an inlaid chair belonging to Lady Cowdray was in the showroom, an order having been given for petit point covers in a lovely design for a set of 22 similar chairs. Attention was drawn to a small square mat made of hessian with darned stripes in orange, red, gray and purple buttonholed at the edge and lined with macintosh. The picturesque pillow-shaped garden cushions in green or natural-colored hessian have quaint bird designs, like those in filet lace, outlined with black and the background darned in with rust color, blue, or some other tint. ### Industry and Genius

Every great orator in history was failure in the beginning. Paderewski was expelled from one of the great conservatories of Europe and told he could never learn to play the plano. He was seriously recommended to study the piccolo as he then could always get a job in an orchestra. Verdi wrote for twelve years and produced eighteen operas before he brought forth "Rigoletto," his first score of intrinsic merit, perhaps excepting Henry Irving failed in his first an-pearance, and was urged by all his friends to go back to the desk and ledger. Shelley's first poem "Queen Mab" was poor stuff, flimsy and incoherent. Edison worked from eighteen to twenty hours a day for seven months trying to teach a phonograph to pronounce the letter "s." We look upon Chopin as having his genius handed to him on a gold platter yet his practice at the piano was . . . for hours at a stretch, repeating a single bar over and over again for nearly a thousand times.

These men made themselves geniuses by their own supreme efforts, raised what might have been mere mediocrity or perhaps talent to supreme power.—William George Jor-dan, in The Forum.

PRESENT-DAY education is sound fundamentally. There can no longer be a question as to that. The true inner character of present-day

The World Conference on Education

education has burst into the open, for it proposes to espouse the most universally righteous cause of the hour, that of international understanding. The first World Conference on Education meets in San Francisco, beginning in the last week in June. Its stated purpose, heading its agenda, is to agree upon a plan for the promotion of good will and understanding which can be adopted as a definite program in schools the world over.

Education, on the occasion of its very first world conference, pushes reading, writing, arithmetic, and all scholastic subjects into second position. It places all regular studies as subsidiary to the paramount international problem-peace, practical, intelligent peace. Therefore, present-day education is bound to make its way through the existing great entangling mesh of doubtful organization, mistaken policies, outworn methods, and uncertain aims. "A good cause makes a stout heart and a strong arm," says a proverb. When a man puts himself unqualifieldy back of a righteous cause, his whole life takes on a richer tone of success and well-being. When a nation makes a righteous cause, like that of woman suffrage or of prohibition, a part of its constitution, that nation, whatever else may be its faults, is building a structure of adamantine. So, if the educators representing the educational systems of the civilized world, meeting in California within the next few days, officially adopt the program as tentatively undertaken in the agenda, the people of those nations may reasonably take hope in the future of education.

"Teachers," "schools," and "pupils" are not the type of words which excite the public ear to tense listening; but statesmen, the public press and public opinion would be forced to cease their activities in the promotion of international peace if they could not depend upon the schools to educate the growing citizens of the world in an intelligent enthusiasm for such an objective. It, therefore, behooves statesmen to esteem educators; it behooves the public press to play up this courageous step of the educators, which may have more to do with the actual establishment of international peace than any other agency or group of agencies, and it behooves the public to give the educators a support that is positive and unmistakable. "A good cause needs help," runs a maxim. "War cannot be successfully abolished except through the complete mobilization of all peace powers for peace purposes," wrote Maj.-Gen. John F. O'Ryan recently in the Journal of the National Education Association.

Educators are thinkers. They think their way along, and they think with a conscience, which means that the general direction of their advance will be right, for the right of anything is accomplished by thinking. It is only when people do not think that things go wrong. Again, within the last few years a large amount of practical teaching has featured school work, many practical subjects being now taken for granted in the curricula. Consequently, the plans to be finally adopted by the conference will carry the mark of practicality and practicability. They, themselves, say: "This conference is called for the purpose of working out definite objectives which can be put into practice immediately in the various educational systems of the world."

If the educators of the world, in conference and realizing that they are the keepers of the future and that education is the "debt eternal," openly assume the responsibility of effectually developing those ethical values necessary to enable the peoples of the earth to live together in friendship and to regard racial traits and national rights without jealousy, the honor and gratitude of the present and all future generations will be their due. If these educators succeed in arranging for a series of international readers and histories which would make current in the schools of all nations the ideas and ideals which each nation deems of universal worth, a marvelously ideal mission will have been brought down to the concrete.

ECONOMISTS, and politicians as well, to say nothing of those of the general public who aspire to no classification whatever in the ranks of agitators or expounders, have the opportunity to devote a little serious thought to the anomalous situation in the West Virginia coal fields. There a mine, owned and controlled by members and officials of a labor union, is shut down because of a controversy with workers who are members also of a labor union. Strange as it may seem, the directing owners of the mine insist that it be operated, if at all, as an "open-shop" industry. Officers and directors of the United Mine Workers are equally insistent that it be operated, if at all, as a "closed shop." And there you have it.

Labor as an Employer

The property over which the controversy has arisen is that of the Coal River Collieries at Ashford, in the State named. The mine represents an estimated value of about $2,500,000, the stock being owned by members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The officers of the coal company are executives of the railway brotherhood. The controversy is an interesting one because the mine is located in a district where the mine workers are carrying on a campaign to force the unionization of all properties not now controlled by the "closed-shop" policy. It is pointed out that all the mines in this section, whether unionized or not, pay their workers on the basis of the scale fixed by agreement with the United Mine Workers. So it appears that there is no dispute over wages or working hours. The end sought by the miners' union is the acceptance by the employers of domination-by the workers and their national organization, presumably with the liability to be closed at any time by the calling of a sympathetic strike or a general strike in the coal-mining industry. The employers, themselves affiliated with a labor union as powerful perhaps as that of the United Mine Workers, insist that they will not voluntarily accept this hazard.

Many interesting aspects are presented. Their consideration is important, as the question affects the whole coal-mining industry. It is the desire of the United Mine Workers, as has long been apparent, to control absolutely every coal-producing property in the United States. Independent operators in the southeastern sections of the country have long opposed the unionization of their mines, and it has been charged that their motives were selfish or ulterior. It is hardly to be expected that such a charge can be made by one labor union against another. Possibly no more persuasive argument has ever been offered in support of the "open shop" than that presented by the action of members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers when they find themselves in the position of employers.

IN THE tangled skein of the Far East almost any happening may affect materially others not seemingly cognate. Whether or no more is meant than meets the eye, often more transpires than at first appears likely. Thus the shift in the Chinese Government, which promises to follow President Li's retirement, will have a bearing on the settlement of the dispute between Japanese and American companies over wireless rights in the land. While the ministerial crisis is not connected directly with this controversy, it is held that the effect of any probable change will be to make American success more certain.

The story is soon told. In 1921, the Federal Telegraph Company of Delaware closed an agreement with the Peking Department of Communications under which it contracted to link China and the United States by a $13,000,000 wireless system. R. P. Schwerin, president of the American concern, had reached Shanghai with a corps of engineers, ready to start construction there on what was to be the first of five great stations, when all advance was checked by representations made at the capital by Tokyo. The Japanese claim is that by a grant issued in February, 1918, the Chinese Naval Office authorized in favor of the Mitsui Bussan Kaisha a thirtyyear monopoly over all radio construction in the Republic. Under this, the Tokyo corporation began building at Peking in 1918, though the station is not yet in working order. If this fact militates against any fait accompli talk, the monopoly argument is weakened by the fact of the construction of a French wireless station at Yunnanfu, capital of Yunnan, under an agreement with the Indo-Chinese Government.

The Washington Administration is standing firmly behind the Federal company, insisting that the Mitsui concession is based on assertions of preferential privileges which cannot be reconciled either with American treaty rights under the 1858 agreement or with the fundamentals of the open-door policy, now officially accepted. Tokyo, on the other hand, holds the Mitsui contract valid because granted by Peking three years before the American concession. It is also contended that a monopoly is necessary from a practical point of view, as two competing companies would not find enough traffic to make business pay. Finally, they say that the Nine-Power Pact provides only for future equality of commercial opportunity in China and cannot affect contractual rights existing before the document was signed.

If it be held that this debate is particularly unfortunate, falling just when Japanese-American relations are again undergoing the strain of differences of opinion as to the rights of Japanese nationals resident in "the States," also may it be said that the cloud is possessed of the proverbial lining. For it is well, obviously, to have a test case of the Open Door theory, now not less than internationally defined, and here it is, clear-cut and striking deep. Moreover, there is provided a tribunal to pass upon the matter in the Board of Reference for China. provided for under the Washington agreement. This body has not yet been established in personnel, but will be set up immediately upon the French ratification of the conference treaties, which is now expected in a near

A GLANCE at a geographical globe shows that the Arctic Ocean is the smallest of all the oceans; also that it is dotted with small islands. That these islands will acquire unwonted value when air commerce is established throughout this region is undoubted, and that such commerce will be established in the comparatively near future appears quite certain. It is customary to think of going to China in terms of east and west, but not of north and south, and yet the northerly route is far nearer in point of actual distance. After the discovery that the world was round until close to a century ago, many efforts were madethe names of Hudson, Frobisher, and Sir John Franklin suggest themselves-to open up the northern route, but without success. Today attention is once more being turned seriously in this direction, but with the air as the medium of traffic.

In this connection an interesting statement has recently been made by the Arctic explorer, Dr. Vilhjálmur Stefansson, which dissipates many time-honored fallacies regarding air navigation in the Polar regions. Speaking generally but deliberately, he says the average educated man's ideas of the Arctic area have come down to him as a heritage from the Greeks and Romans, rather than as the product of modern observation and the study of meteorology. As a simple example, instead of the temperature north of the Arctic circle being exceptionally low throughout the entire twelve months, it frequently rises above 90, and occasionally even to 100, degrees in the shade. Then, instead of there being an absence or deficiency of vegetation in these regions, there are some thirty varieties of ferns, 250 of lichens, and more than 750 of flowering plants, such as timothy, blue grass, dandelions, primroses, various sedges and such like. Further, more than 75 per cent of the land within the Arctic circle during the summer is free from snow, and in many respects is not unlike typical prairie land.

As to the difficulties which would be encountered in air navigation in this region, Dr. Stefansson maintains it is simply a question of obtaining reliability and endurance of machinery-in exactly the same manner in which these factors had to be reckoned with by Hawker, Alcock, and the other long-distance fliers, whether over land or sea. From this standpoint, the recent announcement that the ZR-1, now being completed at Lakehurst, N. J., will fly across the North Polar area in the spring or summer of 1924, assumes great significance. Its initial trip, moreover, is planned, not as an exploratory flight, but strictly as a commercial venture, which makes it all the more important and remarkable. That the conquest of the northern sections of the globe is in sight, so far as the air regions are concerned, at any rate, seems assured. It is just a question which nation will make the primary trip and which will develop most successfully the opportunities and the possibilities which will thereby be opened to the world.

UNDUE concern has been shown over the steadily receding prices of commodities and the recent heavy liquidation of securities on the stock exchanges. The decline in oil, cotton, wheat, corn, sugar, and copper prices has been quite severe in some cases, and those who have speculated on the long side of these commodities have lost money. Naturally, this has led to some misgivings as to the future of business. But the fact is, these price declines have been for the most part in line with the natural order of things. The economic world is simply getting back to normal conditions.

The cost of living is still about 60 per cent above prewar times, and for some time past has shown little inclination to recede. With falling commodity prices there should soon be a tendency toward easier living conditions. However, wages are high, and about every man in the United States who wants work can find it. This means great buying power. It is, therefore, easy to understand, despite pessimistic utterances, why the retail trade as a whole is able to report an enormous business, many lines breaking all previous records. It also accounts for the reports of record-breaking freight car loadings for this

An announcement of much interest is that in three months ended June 1, United States imports have actually exceeded exports by approximately $150,000,000: Last month's excess of imports over exports amounted to $51,000,000. A trade balance adverse to the United States has excited some discussion, and even apprehension. But there is no cause for alarm. The large imports are mainly due to the industrial activity in the United States. These imports will be very largely instrumental in helping the European countries to recover their equilibrium and pay their debts to the United States. As pointed out by Secretary Hoover: "It must be obvious that in the long run the buying power of foreign countries for our export trade depends upon the volume of goods that are bought by us from them.'

It has been asserted by some that the United States can get along very well without the help of foreign countries, as foreign commerce has constituted a comparatively small part of its trade. This is a fallacy that is becoming increasingly evident. It is true that foreign trade in past years has been small compared with the international commerce of other nations. But productive capacity of the United States has been tremendously increased. The World War was in large part responsible for this. An outlet for the increased surplus must be found. There is an urgent demand abroad for many of the commodities produced in America. When credit is restored, the European demand should take care of any surplus production of the United States.

Editorial Notes

PRESIDENT HARDING'S action in pardoning twentyseven of the federal prisoners convicted of violating purely war-time laws will be welcomed as most auspicious and opportune by hundreds who have been watching the fate of these men for many months past. In this connection it may be recalled that about a year ago President Harding declared unequivocally, when referring to these "political" prisoners, that he would never pardon any criminal who was guilty of preaching the destruction of the Government by force. Hence presumably he has his good reasons for refusing the applications for a pardon in twenty-one other cases. Anyhow, now that the war is so completely a thing of the past, it should be taken for granted that these "political" offenses are no longer to be thought of in the way in which they were six or seven years ago.

ANNOUNCEMENT that the Soviet Government has assumed all claims which may be brought against the American Relief Administration after that organization leaves Russia certainly looks as if it intended to take care of the welfare of its peoples from now on. If out of the Bolshevist Administration arises a stable government, pledged to law and order, which is more than possible, therein will be contained a lesson worth considering by all those who in the past have seen in it no possibilities of good. A safe general rule is to wait a little while before passing irrevocable judgment.!

A Political Parallel: 1823-1923 By AN OBSERVER OF POLITICS

(Second Article)

In 1824 the House of Representatives, as a result of the failure of any nominee to secure a majority in the electoral college, elected John Quincy Adams President. The action was widely unpopular, as Andrew Jackson had polled a plurality of both the popular and the electoral votes. Furthermore, the acceptance of the post of Secretary of State by Henry Clay aroused charges of a corrupt bargain by the friends of that statesman whose votes defeated Jackson and installed

It is possible now, 100 years after Jackson's defeat, that political history may repeat itself. Intimate friends of Mr. Henry Ford quote him as having said that there will be four tickets in the field in 1924: the Republican, Democratic, a third party, and the Ford ticket. Whether he said it or not, it is quite a plausible prognostication. Organizations like the Committee of Forty-Eight and the Farmer-Labor Party are likely to have a ticket of their own, unless, indeed, they reach out to take Ford into their camp. But supposing there are four tickets-one headed by the redoubtable Michigan manufacturer and his unquestioned vote-getting capacity-it is wholly possible, in such event, that no nominee will get a majority of all the electoral votes. In that event, the Sixty-Eighth Congress, which was elected in 1922 and takes office next December, will elect the President. And mark! the members of that body will not vote as individuals, but by states, each state voting as a unit. This fact is of vital importance. It is not probable, for example, that any radical candidate like Ford could carry New York under any conditions. In his individual case, it is made even more improbable by the very heavy Jewish vote in that State, which, it is believed, would be cast against him. But while, in the electoral college, New York casts 45 votes, in the House of Representatives it would cast but one. The favor of Nevada alone would offset the hostility of the Empire State of the

But this does not tell the whole story. The members of Congress who will, if that duty shall be imposed upon them, select the President have already been elected. They are, with three exceptions, either Republicans or Democrats. The states stand: Republican 23, Democratic 20, and five states in which the delegation is tied. Will they, then, vote simply for the Republican or the Democratic nominee, supposing that either of the other candidates should have rolled up a tremendous popular plurality in the country?

It is a question worth considering. Let us suppose, for example, that Michigan has voted overwhelmingly for Ford, taking Ford merely as an example of the independent candidate. The election goes to the House, but the Michigan delegation in Congress is virtually solidly Republican. Would they cast the vote of their State for the Republican nominee, or for the man who had carried the State? If they did the former, what hope would they have of future preferment in the districts which had elected Ford, only to be cheated by their sitting representatives? This situation may be multiplied as many times as there are states, because no political observer can doubt that, with a quadrangular fight, many states will be lost to the old parties which are now represented in Congress by either Democrats or Republicans.

* * * But suppose that the members of the House of Representatives should vote strictly along party lines. Let us consider what the result would be in such case. As I have already noted, the House stands: Republican, 23 states; Democratic, 20, and tied delegations (Maryland, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, and New Jersey), the precedent set at the election of John Quincy Adams, the states in which the delegations are tied have no vote. But Amendment XII of the Constitution distinctly provides that "a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice" -not of all the states voting. Twenty falls short of a majority of forty-eight. Should both Democrats and Republicans stick to their candidates, and no majority be obtained by any candidate, the Vice-President, if one shall have been elected, will be inaugurated as President under Amendment XII.

But here arises another complication. Under our present form of elections, the President and Vice-President elected on the same ticket, and seeking the support of the same electors, stand or fall together. If no vice-presidential candidate shall secure a majority of the electoral vote, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President from the two highest on the list. A majority of the Senate shall be necessary to a choice. The present Senate being Republican by eight, it is reasonable to anticipate that it could, without difficulty, select a Republican Vice-President in the event of the failure of the House to elect. But there stands in the path one possible difficulty. It is imaginable, at least, that in the turmoil of a quadrangular fight the Republican nominees might be third. The Constitution limits the Senate to a choice of one of the first two in the poll of the electoral college. There might fall upon a Republican Senate the melancholy choice of making either a Democrat or the head of one of the two radical tickets President of the United States.

In offering these facts for the consideration of readers, I can suggest no remedy for the dangers plainly threatening. Any man who can rally about him a sufficient following has a perfect right to be a candidate for President. If his strength at the polls is great enough, he will either be elected by the electoral college, or will compel the election to be taken to Congress. If the constitutional procedure involved in the latter action threatens evil, it is, nevertheless, constitutional, and must be followed. If there be any remedy, it must take the form of precaution. Should the two old parties make their conventions thoroughly representative of the public willwhich, as a rule, they are not-the incentive to men to stand on or support independent tickets would be greatly lessened.

But if men, obviously the choice of large numbers of voters, are denied fair treatment in the nominating conventions, there will infallibly be independent tickets in the field. And if the head of one of these independent tickets should get a plurality of the popular vote and a plurality of the electoral vote, as did Andrew Jackson in 1824, and still be deprived of the presidency by intrigues and bargains in the House or Senate, the two old parties will suffer a long period of eclipse. It was precisely this method of defeating Jackson in 1824 that made him supreme in 1828 and for years following. The parallel is one for present-day politicians to study.

(A third article by the same writer, pointing out certain re-semblances between political conditions today and those of 1823, will appear in an early number of The Christian Science Monitor.)
